

Lewis Fined $10,000 And UMW Assessed $3,500,000

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—The United Mine Workers was fined $3,500,000 and John L. Lewis personally $10,000 today for contempt of court in the coal strike but Lewis escaped a jail term.

The Court's verdict was announced at 3:45 p. m. today. Lewis accused government counsel of lying to the court about his expense account and Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough said: "Don't get in contempt of court, I advise you sir."

Lewis, for whom the government asked "substantial" but not jail punishment, replied: "Sir, I have been adjudged in contempt."

"There could be another contempt proceeding," Goldsborough retorted. Lewis sat down.

Goldsborough said quietly: "This is an unusual situation—an unprecedented situation. This is not the case of a low law breaker. It's an evil, a monstrous thing. It means hunger and cold and destitution. It's a threat to democratic government itself."

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—The government today asked Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough to fine John L. Lewis United Mine Workers $3,500,000 in punishment for contempt of court in the coal strike.

John F. Sonnett, the government attorney, made his recommendation after Judge Goldsborough asked both sides for their views as to sentence.

Sonnett said the government believed that the union has substantial financial resources and that "appropriate punishment" would be a fine of $3,500,000.

Sonnett made no recommendation for a jail sentence for Lewis, the only individual defendant.

Welly K. Hopkins, union lawyer, then said: "We would have no views to express, except in the light of the views that might be expressed by the government."

Asks Injunction
Secretary-treasurer Thomas Kennedy reported the union's treasury consisted of $13,500,000 at the recent UMW convention.

Imprisonment of the union leader would "accomplish nothing" in the opinion of the Federal Mines Administration, Sonnett told the court.

Sonnett also renewed the government's plea for a temporary injunction to replace the restraining order now outstanding against Lewis and UMW.

Sonnett told the court: "Your honor will recollect that 14 full days have run between 2:15 p.m. on November 18, 1946, when these defendants were served with the court's restraining order, and the date of their conviction. Thus, the fine, considered on a daily basis would average $250,000 per day."

Punish Lewis
"With respect to the individual defendant, John L. Lewis it is recommended that this court impose a substantial punishment having in mind the public interest previously mentioned."

"It is difficult to advise your honor as to what, in fact, would constitute an appropriate punishment for this defendant."

"In considering the recommendation which the government should make to its court concerning the sentence to be imposed on the defendant, Lewis, we have, of course, consulted with the Coal Mines Administration, which is in charge of the mines."

"The view of the Coal Mines Administration, in which we concur, is that, at this time, a jail sentence for the individual defendant can accomplish nothing toward restoration of coal production and right, to the contrary, place a further obstacle on that objective."

HISTORIANS ASK QUESTIONS ON COUNTY LORE

Did Samuel Gettys, father of the founder of Gettysburg, have eleven children?

That question was put to the Adams County Historical society Tuesday evening with the announcement by Dr. Henry Stewart that he had in his possession a manuscript listing that many children of the pioneer settler here. But so far the authenticity of the manuscript, owned by a Colonel Charles Gettys in Delaware who claims to be a descendant of Samuel, has not been proven.

One factor in favor of the yet unproved document is the fact that it lists as sons or daughters of Gettys a number of names that appear among the original lot holders of the town and of whom previously nothing was known. According to the manuscript Gettys had five daughters and six sons. Previously only about four were known to be children of Samuel Gettys.

Any Clockmakers Here?

Dr. Robert Fortenbaugh, Dr. Frederick Tilberg, Dr. Robert A. Bream, Hugh C. McIlhenny and Dr. R. S. Saby were named as a nominating committee to report at the January meeting of the society while Mrs. G. H. Buehler, Miss Nina Storrick and Harry G. Deatrack were selected as an auditing committee.

The unsolved problem of the number of Samuel Gettys' children was but one of a number of historical (Please Turn to Page 2)

Industries Will Be Hard Hit By Embargo On Freight Friday

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—A government order holding railroad freight to the most vital needs struck a staggering new blow today to industries struggling to maintain operations despite the coal strike. Widespread factory shutdowns, with consequent unemployment for thousands now working, appeared in prospect.

Officials explained that the order and a companion restriction on parcel post are designed to assure that coal-burning locomotives can be kept running on reduced schedules until mid-February.

They did not predict a coal strike lasting that long but said the fuel-saving measures are precautionary in event no more coal is mined before then.

The measures, coming in swift succession late yesterday, hit both home and factory. They:

1. Clamped an embargo on all rail freight and express shipments, with the exception of commodities and supplies necessary to the maintenance of public health and safety, effective 12:01 a. m., Friday.
2. Ordered a second 25 per cent cut in rail passenger mileage, effective 11:59 p. m., Sunday.
3. Limited the weight of parcel post to five pounds in packages measuring not more than 18 inches in length and 60 inches in length and girth combined, effective 12:01 a. m., Friday.
4. Subjected all export shipments except bulk grain, livestock and exports for the armed services to shipment under special permit, effective last midnight.

Officials of the office of defense transportation estimated the embargo action would reduce freight and express shipments 50 per cent.

COTILLION TO OPEN SEASON NEXT TUESDAY

The Cotillion will hold three dances in addition to the opening dinner-dance. They will be held at Hotel Gettysburg on February 20, March 13 and April 24.

Officers of the organization are Mrs. R. W. Gifford, president; Mrs. Frederic Griest, vice president, and Mrs. Edmund W. Thomas, secretary-treasurer.

Following the dinner next Tuesday the members will receive the report of a nominating committee and election of new officers for the coming year will be held.

The Cotillion is limited in its membership to 50 couples. Guests may be invited to the individual dances, with the exception of the opening dinner, but a limit of 15 guest couples is established.

Members who are not able to attend the opening affair on December 10 are requested to advise Mrs. Gifford so that reservations will not be made for them.

Chet Shaeffer and his orchestra, of Hanover, will provide the music for the opening dance which will start at 9 o'clock. The dinner will start promptly at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Gifford announced, so as to allow time for the business meeting before the dance.

$1,000 FIRE LOSS AT LITTLESTOWN

The Alpha Fire company, Littlestown, answered a call at 2 p. m. Tuesday to the home of John Fogle, on the Old Mill road, one mile southwest of Littlestown. In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Fogle, the man's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Fogle, lived there. The house is owned by Hobson Crouse, and is a weather-board bungalow.

The fire was caused by an overheated kitchen range, which ignited the ceiling on the first floor, and spread to the top of the structure. The fire was extinguished with water from the booster tank. Smoke and water ruined most of the furniture and clothing.

The fire chief, Jay D. Basehoar, estimated damage to the property at $500 and $500 damage to furniture and clothing.

The elder Mr. Fogle, who has been bedfast for the last five years, was removed in the Littlestown Community ambulance to the home of Roger Kress, Littlestown, father of Mrs. John Fogle. He occupied a bed on the first floor of the Fogle home.

JAILED YOUTH ADMITS THEFT IN TENNESSEE

Chief of Police Robert C. Harpster today announced that a man arrested November 26 as John Robert Nelson, 18, for questioning in connection with a series of larcenies here, has admitted that his name is William A. Breeden, of Knoxville, Tenn., and that he is wanted in Knoxville on a charge of breaking and entering.

Breeden was questioned at length this morning by Chief Harpster at police headquarters. Harpster said the youth told him he is wanted in Knoxville for entering the home of Mrs. Andrew McFall, Knoxville, and stealing a jar containing $185. He said he was willing to waive extradition, Harpster said.

Arrested In Cornfield

Chief Harpster said he would confer with District Attorney J. Francis Yake, Jr., today as to whether charges of larceny would be filed and Breeden prosecuted here, or whether local authorities would relinquish Breeden to Knoxville police.

Breeden, under the name as Nelson, was arrested in a cornfield on the Fairfield road November 26 by Borough Police Officers C. William Zhea and Charles W. Culp, Jr., after he had escaped from another police officer in front of the jail on East High street. The officer had picked up the youth for questioning. Breeden attempted to wrest Zhea's gun from him during a tussle in the cornfield, police said.

Threat To Lives

"He told me this morning that if he had been able to get the gun, he would have shot both of the police officers, and taken the car of a state highway department employee to make his escape," Harpster said.

Robert Thompson, assistant highway superintendent, was passing in his car when the officers were attempting to apprehend Breeden in the cornfield. He had stopped his (Please Turn to Page 7)

Here And There News Collected At Random

Some of the recent criticism leveled at the Gettysburg Fire Company reminds this reporter of the bursting of a soap bubble in a boiler factory. In comparative gusto with the merit of our local volunteer firemen it is even more shallow . . . and groundless.

Of all the splendid organizations in Gettysburg our local fire company is well able to measure service-for-service with any . . . and it deserves the unqualified support of the entire community.

We feel it can be truthfully said that no other community of like size in this country can boast of a better volunteer fire company. Certainly none serves with more enthusiasm and community interest than our own department.

For more than 22 years your reporter has observed with genuine interest and appreciation the results of the efforts of the Gettysburg firemen.

At the first sound of the siren scores of men drop their civil pursuits and dash for the engine house. They know not the nature of the fire, or its extent. Regardless, without thought of themselves, firemen boldly and bravely attack any and all sizes of fires in this and neighboring communities.

They risk their lives, endanger their health and ruin their clothes to quell the flames. They ask not whether the fire victim is rich or poor. They care not his faith or creed. It is a fire and they are determined to control it in the quickest possible time with a minimum of loss.

It is through the combined efforts of each individual member of the Gettysburg Fire Company that fire insurance rates have been decreased here. Many fires that at the outset bore every indication of being a major catastrophe have dwindled to minor blazes . . . and all because of the firemen.

BOY Christmas

NEW OXFORD'S SCHOOL SETUP IS COMMENDED

New Oxford's new junior-senior high school program which began this fall is praised in the report of Dr. Edwin W. Cruttenford, chief of Secondary Education, Department of Public Instruction, following his inspection of the New Oxford school system. It was learned today.

Ivan R. Mechtly, supervising principal at the school, read Doctor Cruttenford's report at a meeting Monday of the school faculty in the school library.

"Last year the high school enrolled in grades 9 to 12, 130 pupils," Doctor Cruttenford's report disclosed. "This year the enrollment, grades 9 to 12, is approximately 250 pupils. Not only has the program of studies been extended and improved for the pupils in the 7th, 8th and 9th grades, but a reorganization has been made possible for the elementary schools now sending tuition pupils to New Oxford. The benefits which will accrue in the educational program for all of these districts will, I am sure, become increasingly apparent to the citizens."

Comments Officials "While for the most part the expansion of the secondary program to include the 7th and 8th grades has been smoothly and efficiently carried out there are some areas in which Mr. Mechtly will want to change as the year progresses. Other improvements should be planned for the next school year, and still others should be studied as part of a long term plan for providing secondary school facilities equal to those of other districts of comparable size."

After making several specific recommendations the Cruttenford report concludes: "On the whole I was very pleased to see the improvements which have been made this year. Mr. Mechtly, members of the faculty, and the board of school directors are to be commended for the way in which all have cooperated in improving the facilities for high school instruction."

Improvements Planned "I am sure that the excellent start that has been made will result in continued change and growth."

Many of the recommendations by Doctor Cruttenford have already been carried out, Mechtly told the faculty, and others have been authorized by the board as soon as materials and services are available. Purchase of additional equipment for the office, library, home economics and commercial departments have been made or orders have been placed, he added, pledging the local board's cooperation with county officials, the state and neighboring districts "in any reasonable and workable plan to better the educational facilities for the community."

WILL ORGANIZE CEMETERY UNIT

A meeting will be held in the Sunday school room of Zion Lutheran church, Fairfield, Wednesday evening, December 11, at 7:30 o'clock to form the organization for conducting the Fairfield Union cemetery as a corporation.

Judge W. C. Sheely granted a charter for the proposed project on November 16 for the incorporation of the Union cemetery, the corporate name of which is now the Fairfield Union cemetery.

In response to an expansion and improvement campaign several months ago, residents of the Fairfield community over-subscribed the minimum goal of $2,000 for the project by nearly $500. Due to the success of the drive, steps were taken by the official board of Zion Lutheran church, at the recommendation of a community meeting held in August, to shift the care and up-keep of the cemetery from the hands of the church to the community.

The plan of organization includes: a general community body, to be called the Community Council, in which will be centered all the legal and administrative affairs of the corporation, and a board of directors, six in number, who will be the agents of the Community Council and have full and direct charge of the management of all the practical affairs of the cemetery.

All adult citizens of the Fairfield community are urged to attend the meeting. All will have an equal voice and vote in the business of the meeting. In addition to the election of a board of directors, another primary purpose will be the adoption of a constitution.

HEADS CIRCLE FOR 3RD TERM

Mrs. S. Lester Scott was elected for her third term as president of Trinity Circle of the Trinity Reformed church at the regular monthly meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. W. Preston Hull, Chambersburg street.

Other officers elected were: vice president, Mrs. J. William Kenderhart; secretary, Miss Alice Snyder, Baltimore street; treasurer, Miss Helen Culp, Chambersburg street; financial secretary, Mrs. Curtis Flohr, West Middle street.

Mrs. Scott succeeds Mrs. Sara Bollinger as president. She named the following committees: program, Mrs. Fred A. Hummelbaugh, Mrs. George T. Raffensperger and Mrs. Charles W. Ogden; ways and means, Mrs. Robert Weikert, Mrs. Harry Lower and Mrs. Perry J. Tawney.

Mrs. Robert Weikert presided in the absence of the president. The circle voted to give $15 to the Hoffman orphanage and $15 to Home-wood at Hagerstown, and $40 to the Women's guild of the church. A Christmas hymn sing was a part of the program, and Miss Snyder gave a reading of a Christmas story. Christmas gifts were exchanged. Associate hostesses were Mrs. Tawney, Miss Snyder and Mrs. George Rebert.

SENDS FOOD TO GREEK FAMILIES

N. A. Meligakes, Center Square, has already telegraphed 105 pounds of food to two Greek families, who are distant relatives of his, through the Greek War Relief Association's "Telegraph a Food Package" campaign, the Greek War Relief Association revealed today.

Because the food situation in Greece is the most critical in the country's history this winter, the association is seeking others to emulate Mr. Meligakes' action in sending food. Questioned today by the Gettysburg Times, the local restaurant owner said that letters sent him by the families in Greece revealed that the food he had sent them was the most they had seen in months and that previous money contributions he had sent them proved of little use as there was little food available at any price.

The food packages sent by the GWRA weigh 35 pounds each and will lift an average Greek family of six to eight people from starvation to a subsistence level for one week, the GWRA reports. They cost $12.75.

School Problems Get More Thought

Harrisburg, Dec. 4 (P)—School teacher salaries and state subsidies for education and the related problem of taxes were discussed in detail by the Legislature's school commission yesterday without reaching any conclusions.

"The members agreed the questions were so far reaching and so important that they decided to go home and think about it and return for a further discussion next Tuesday," a commission spokesman said.

The commission, set up originally by the 1943 Legislature, was directed in 1945 to go into the entire problem of school finances in connection with the rising cost of education.

The spokesman said the commission's executive committee has the facts but "they want to study them before making any recommendations."

The 1947 Legislature, which will receive the commission's report, already is faced with demands from school teachers organizations for in-

New Ambassador Visited Gettysburg

Washington, Dec. 4 (P)—O. Max Gardner's shift from second spot in the Treasury to the American Embassy in London underlined today the importance the United States attaches to international economic cooperation as the world tries for a post-war comeback.

The former North Carolina governor, whose appointment as ambassador was announced by President Truman yesterday, has dealt a big hand in economic and financial affairs both as Treasury under-secretary and as chairman of the board of advisers to the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion.

The post at the Court of St. James became vacant when President Truman moved Averill Harriman to the cabinet, replacing Henry A. Wallace as head of the Commerce department.

O. Max Gardner, undersecretary of the Treasury, named Ambassador to the Court of St. James by President Truman, will be remembered by some Gettysburgians. As Governor of North Carolina Mr. Gardner came to Gettysburg to dedicate the North Carolina monument on the Battlefield.

The meeting was held in the society rooms in the court houses.

Here And There

Some of our worst fires have broken out in the dead of night, in bitter cold, yet Gettysburg firemen have unflinchingly fought the dangerous blazes without thought of personal comfort or risk.

That our department has done a mighty swell job goes without saying. That they do not deserve unfair criticism is measured by the same standard of fairness.

In the humble opinion of your reporter Gettysburg's fire company should have the finest equipment available. Each active firefighter should have the most modern gear. There should be no quibbling over costs.

Their remuneration is a few paltry "feeds" through the year and for some a trip to the state convention. When measured in dollar and cents it would require a slide-rule, micrometer and a battery of accountants to bring it within striking distance of pay for a child.

Give our firemen what they need to fight fires and all of us will rest easier when the siren blows.

questions posed by the society in a round table discussion that was held when the scheduled speaker, Miss Edna Albert, was unable to attend the session.

One of the "problems" brought forth at the meeting was the question of whether Gettysburg ever had any clockmakers. Several members suggested that a Kepingler was supposed to have at one time made clocks here, two of which are said to be still in existence, but no member was able to give authentic detail.

Discuss Early Roads

A discussion on roads led by Dr. Robert Fortenbaugh, who is seeking to obtain a complete collection of named roads in the county, led through the outlining of such thoroughfares as the Shirlitt road, near Delone high school at McSherrystown, Black lane, between Conewago chapel and Irishtown, through the Bullfrog, Potato, Cranberry, Low Dutch, and Menallen roads to a discussion of turnpikes, four of which at one time ran out of Gettysburg.

The discussion also disclosed that the "State road," first in this section to be built by a state commission, and now the Harrisburg road, extended south of town as well as north of it. The discussion on roads also led to the information that the Shippensburg road, now the Mummansburg road, at one time ran straight through the town and that it was along this road that Gettys built his tavern at the time when two roads intersecting here formed a favorable spot for Gettys' enterprise. The present Mummansburg street marks the line of the old Mummansburg road which extended through the town on more or less a direct line with Mummansburg street out through the high school grounds and past Spangler's spring.

Society Gets High-Wheel Bike

The toll roads leading out of Gettysburg at one time were the Gettysburg-Petersburg (Littlestown) pike, the Gettysburg-Black's Tavern, (Cashtown) road, the Mummansburg road and the York road.

Among the accessions reported by the society for the past month was a high front wheeled bicycle which Doctor Stewart used in 1886 and a book containing the reminiscences of General Herman Haupt, who was proprietor of the Oak Ridge academy.

The meeting was held in the society rooms in the court houses.

APPLE GROWERS ASSAIL STORAGE REPORT BY U.S.

The United States Department of Agriculture has been asked pointedly by resolution of the 20-grower directorate of Appalachian Apple Service, four-state growers association, in session at Martinsburg, W. Va., to "correct" its cold storage report for November because of its invitation to misinterpret the figures.

A number of Adams county fruitmen are associated with the Appalachian Apple Service.

In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, the resolution said, according to Carroll R. Miller, secretary-manager:

"USDA's November 1 cold storage report gives, unintentionally, a distorted picture of the apple cold storage holdings, a distorted picture is costly to the apple-growers and the apple industry generally.

Claim Big Error
"The report, citing 32,010,000 bushels in storage, makes no mention of the heavy quantities that are stored for processors. A rough but conservative estimate indicates some five million bushels are stored for processors.

"This lowers the stored holdings for fresh-fruit channels.

"Cold storage of apples by and for processors is something new, within the past several years only. It must be reckoned with henceforth, for simple accuracy and justice.

"Our board of directors requests: (1) That an immediate 'correction' be made and publicized to the fruit-distributing trade and the public; and (2) the monthly reports designate clearly the amounts stored for fresh-fruit channels and for processing."

Spray Peach Trees—To assure a good peach crop next year, part of the spraying must be done after the buds crack next spring. Extension specialists of the Pennsylvania State college say that this first spray is to prevent peach leaf curl, reduce brown rot, and control San Jose and tetranych scales.

Prevent Heat Leaks—Preventing heat leaks by use of weather stripping, storm sash, insulation and caulking to close cracks around windows, takes on added cash value with each new rise in fuel costs.

Prove Dairy Sires—Only proved sires should be used in the dairy herd, according to R. R. Welch, extension dairy specialist of the Pennsylvania State college. These sires increase the production of their daughters over that of their mothers.

Dust Dogs With DDT—A 5 per cent DDT powder dusted on dogs and rubbed into their hair by hand will spell finish to fleas, says E. J. Udine, extension entomologist of the Pennsylvania State college. He cautions against inhaling much of the dust.

News Of Interest To Upper Communities Of County

Santa Claus Coming To Arendtsville December 20

A communication direct from the North Pole today revealed that Santa Claus, in person, not a reasonable facsimile, will visit the Arendtsville fire engine house sometime during the afternoon of Friday, December 20.

A telegram sent by the jovial saint to the fire company president, Emory Fissel, asked Mr. Fissel to meet him at an unannounced point near the upper county borough and to provide transportation from that spot to Arendtsville.

"Because of the tremendous demands that will be made on Donner, Blitzen and the other reindeer on the night of December 24-25," the telegram to Mr. Fissel said, "it is not considered practicable to take any chance with the reindeer by bringing them clear into the town. The animals love children just as much as children love them and when the two get together it is always difficult to get the reindeer to consent to return to the North Pole. This goes particularly for Donner who has been showing his years of service recently and easily tires."

With Santa will come some candy, some oranges and some apples which will be distributed to the children at the engine house by Santa and his aides. The firemen plan to meet Wednesday night December 18, to make final arrangements for Santa's visit and to get everything in readiness for his stay there.

Personally vouching for Santa's safe arrival in Arendtsville, President Fissel pointed out that "We'll get him there by tractor, horse-drawn truck, dog sled, airplane or whatever means of locomotion can be obtained."

Protect Woodlands—Because of the heavy cutting program during wartime, all young tree growth now should be protected, and thinning and culling practiced where needed, say Penn State extension foresters.

Re-invest Farm Cash—Farmers are advised to re-invest part of their savings in their own business. Kenneth Hood, extension agricultural economist of the Pennsylvania State college, says that money spent for pasture improvement, erosion control, better livestock, and labor-saving machinery will pay big dividends and can help ease strain from any unfavorable years.

Hens Like Comfort—Poultrymen prepared to adjust ventilating conditions in their laying houses when cold winds and wet weather strike suddenly, can keep interruptions to production from these causes at lowest level.

Dig Flower Garden—Where conditions are favorable, digging the flower garden now will save time and permit earlier planting next spring, says A. O. Rasmussen, Penn. horticulturist.

NEW PLANT IN BENDERSVILLE

Bendersville's industrial life is increasing with one new plant opening last Friday and another scheduled to open after the first of the year.

With ten employees already at work the Keystone Ceramic Co. is expected to have its plant in production within the next two weeks, and expects to begin hiring "quite a few" additional employees starting today.

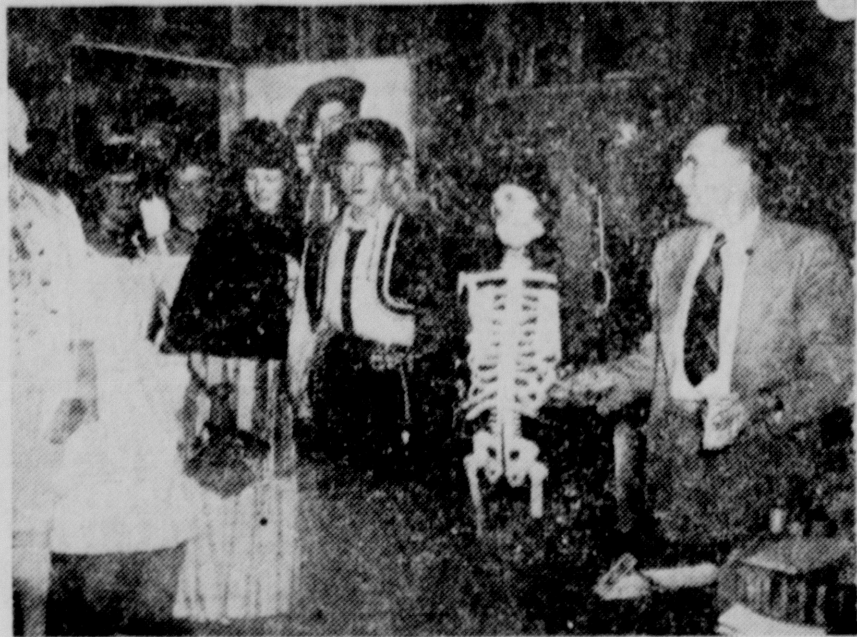

Dedication exercises for the new 60 feet by 112 feet concrete block plant is scheduled within the next few weeks, officials of the plant said today. Further details of the dedication will be announced later.

John J. Reimer, Aspers, is president of the company; Richard L. Galusha, vice president and J. H. Macbeth secretary-treasurer.

Work has been continuing on the Carroll Shoe company footwear plant at Bendersville with workmen having already completed nearly all of the outside work. Workmen are also engaged in the interior work with the plant to get under operation in the near future.

Mulch Evergreens—Mulch all recently planted evergreens and shrubs with well-decomposed hardwood sawdust or peat moss to protect them during the winter. Handle these materials carefully, since contact with the crowns of plants may result in sunscald.

Bigger Mardi Gras Being Planned For Next Year

The above scene is scheduled for a repeat performance next year with the Arendtsville Fire company planning to hold another Mardi Gras after the great success it had with the first such program this year. Harvey Raffensperger is shown paying off the winners in the costume contest held in connection with the Mardi Gras on Halloween night at Arendtsville Union park. Receiving a prize is Fred Weber of Cashtown, who won the oddest dressed costume prize. Behind him are other winners awaiting their turn for prizes.

Arendtsville's fire company will stage its second annual Mardi Gras during the Halloween period next year.

That announcement was made today by the company together with the announcement that M. Leroy Zeigler, Gettysburg R. 3, had been renamed as general chairman of the Mardi Gras committee. Selected to work with him on the program are Arnold Orner, E. D. Bushman, Harvey Raffensperger, Clyde Allison, Earl Staub and Mrs. Eva Rexroth, the same committee which had charge of the first program held this past Halloween and which produced the most successful program of its type ever held in the Arendtsville section.

Chairman Zeigler said today that "we dreamed of 5,000 persons present this year and the dream came true, next year we hope to do even better than that."

Because the 5,000 persons who jammed the Arendtsville Union park Halloween night for the first Mardi Gras found some difficulty in getting about in the fairly dark park, the committee plans next year to use an even larger transformer and put in more lights throughout the park. They also are planning to have twice as many pavilions in operation next year. They also plan twice as much activity in order to take

URGES STEPS TO CONTROL BLIGHT

In view of the possibility of a recurrence in 1947 of tomato blight which during the 1946 growing season reduced yields in Adams county to about 50 per cent of a normal crop, and wiped out some fields entirely, canners and other growers will do well to take ample precautions, Dr. L. O. Weaver, extension plant pathologist of the Pennsylvania State college, declared today.

The reasons for the heavy losses in 1946, Doctor Weaver stated, were chiefly the introduction of the fungus organisms early in the season through use of imported plants care of the expected larger crowd. This year square and round dancing was provided, a magic show was held, a motion picture was shown, and games were played. There were free cider and apples. A grand march was held for those who chose to come in costume and prizes were given to the men, women and children who had the best costumes.

Similar activities are planned for next year, Chairman Zeigler said, but there will be more of everything.

The same committees which "served so well in handling the thousand and one details" of the program will be asked to serve again next year, the fire company revealed.

which had been infected, the continued prevalence of weather favorable to the development of blight, and the lack of adequate control—use of sprays and dusts.

Extension plant pathologists and county agents, he recounted, discovered the disease in late May this year, several months in advance of its normal appearance. Use of effective fungicides was urged, and where these were applied, even after the disease made its appearance, some control was established. Where sprays were applied early, more of the crop was saved.

Looking to the 1947 season, Doctor Weaver stressed a thorough spray coverage, and discussed with the canners kinds of materials to use and methods of application. He emphasized also the need for wider spacing of rows to permit use of power sprayers throughout the growing season. By attaching a different boom to conform to the wider rows, potato sprayers can be used satisfactorily on tomatoes, he said.

Recommended tomato spray schedules, together with information on fungicides and their application, will be available at County Agent M. T. Hartman's office in advance of the 1947 planting season.

INDIA'S FUTURE AT STAKE IN LONDON PARLEY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

There's plenty to distract our attention here at home—what with the cold-wave to remind us of the wintry potentialities of the coal stoppage, and the heavy gunfire in our U. N. peace organization—but let's not overlook that impending Indian round-table conference which opened today in London.

The Indian problem ranks among the vital issues of our time. Failure to reach a satisfactory solution might result in the catastrophe of civil war in that country.

That's a hard thing to have to say, but it's true and it is well that we recognize the fact. The round-table conference is a momentous affair.

Leaders Sit Down

Three of the world's outstanding personalities have come out of the far east to sit down in the British capital with government officials to try to figure out ways and means of bringing India's warring Hindus and Moslems together and thereby implementing England's offer of independence to that sub-continent with its four hundred millions.

There is Field Marshal Lord Wavell, viceroy of the King-Emperor's greatest Indian possession. There is Pandit Nehru, the aristocratic Hindu who heads the present interim Indian government and, next to Mahatma Gandhi, is the most powerful leader in the country. There is Mahomed Ali Jinnah, brilliant and highly cultured head of the Moslem league, who guides the destinies of 90,000,000 Moslems.

Upon those three men, more than upon any others, rests the immediate future of India. Wavell's role is largely that of conciliator.

Indian Situation

Here is the Indian situation in brief:

After much sparring and heart-

Today's Talk

ON ACQUIRING

The statement is as old as any statement can be, that nothing can be acquired without hard work. These modern days some look upon this statement as academic—but facts deny such a premise.

In an address given by Somerset Maugham at the Coolidge Auditorium, The Library of Congress, he said: "It is a great nuisance that knowledge cannot be acquired without trouble. It can only be acquired by hard work."

Every day of our lives we acquire something, but that which we acquire through hard work, determination and long effort, is what gives to us the most satisfaction. The things that we earn become the most valuable, and contribute most to our well-being and character growth. I recall a motto of my boyhood days: "No sweat, no sweet!"

My college Alma Mater, Ottawa University, Ottawa, Kansas, conferred upon me an honorary degree a few years ago. Whether I was worthy of it or not, I have no idea, but the very fact that it was offered gave me great happiness for this was the school through which I worked my way by hard manual labor. This is what made that honor the more satisfying to me, furthermore, because I had striven to make that college proud of what I had done about that education, in the years that had followed my graduation.

I have acquired nothing that has not been the result of planning, hard work, often much sacrifice, and patient waiting for a few of my dreams to come true, but this statement is made to encourage others, and not meant as a personal boast. I have had fun in it, for that is what work ought to bring—no matter how long, or difficult the path to one's objective.

The story of every worthwhile human being has always been one of struggle, striving, and with success as the result. It is the usual path, not the unusual. It was twenty years before the genius of Robert Frost, the poet, was widely proclaimed. And many years, as well, before Somerset Maugham's fine masterpiece "Of Human Bondage" was given its just recognition. His first novel was a fine one, though little read, or known today.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Other Folk's Shoes"

Just Folks

All the problems that we face in a world gone mad, Let this happier one replace: "What to get for dad?"

Now the Soviet dismiss, And forget Japan. While the women ponder this: "What to get a man?"

Christmas Day is drawing near. In this troubled life Comes the problem of the year: "What to get the wife?"

New Conference In Beer War Due

Pittsburgh, Dec. 4 (P)—The AFL and CIO factions in the union "beer war" will hold their next "peace conference" on Monday. State Secretary of Labor and Industry William H. Chesnut said today.

Chesnut held separate meetings with the two groups yesterday and a joint meeting with them on Monday, but so far there is no settlement in sight in the battle for control of local brewery employees.

12 DIE IN PLANE CRASH IN STORM

Belfort, France, Dec. 4 (P)—Twelve persons were killed and a 13th was missing Tuesday in the crash late Monday of a French army transport plane during a snow storm in the Vosges mountains.

A woman and two children were among the victims. Four bodies were identified, but names were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The plane was enroute from Liden, Germany, to Paris. It caught fire after falling, burning many bodies beyond recognition.

Rescue parties trudged through a heavy snowfall to the scene, but were held off by fierce fires that burned in the wreckage for 12 hours after the accident. The plane fell on the eastern slope of Balloon D'Alsace peak, past which the American Seventh Army fought during the war.

Three bodies were blown clear of the wreckage by the explosion of gasoline tanks. Nine others and the body of a dog were taken from the remains of the plane. No trace was found of the 13th person who the French air ministry said was aboard.

Confessed Killer Sentenced For Life

Huntingdon, Pa., Dec. 4 (P)—Judge Chester D. Peterhoff, of Huntingdon county court, ruled last night that James Forest Plank, 36-year-old truck driver, was guilty of murder in the first degree in the death of his two-year-old daughter, and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

The jurist handed down his verdict after hearing testimony from several witnesses as to the circumstances of finding the body of little Barbara Ann Plank, with a woman's black glove stuffed down her throat.

Plank pleaded guilty to the murder charge when he was arraigned for trial, and District Attorney I. Newton Taylor said the man had signed a statement admitting strangling the baby to stop her from crying for her mother.

burning both the Hindus and the Moslems agreed to participate in an interim government. Nehru was made chief minister of this provisional regime since he was president of the major political organization, the predominantly Hindu all-India Congress. Both Hindus and Moslems were given positions, and things got under way leading up to the meeting of a national assembly to frame a provisional constitution.

However, the old animosities broke out and the Moslems withdrew. They said they had no chance of fair treatment by the Hindus who outnumbered the Moslems three to one. Therefore Jinnah reverted to his demand for Pakistan, that is, independent Moslem states. Both the Hindus and the British want to see a federal government under which will come all the provinces and states.

But this political break wasn't the worst of the situation. Terrible communal rioting has been going on for weeks in various centers between the Hindus and Moslems. Thousands of lives have been lost and great numbers have been injured.

The probabilities are that Jinnah and Nehru could bring their followers into line, although it would be unwise to take this for granted. There are in both parties extreme left wingers who might challenge the leaders and try to create a civil war.

DEER HUNTER SHOT IN HIP

Pittsburgh, Dec. 4 (P)—James Connor, 16, of Oil City, suffered a minor wound in the hip when struck by a stray bullet while deer hunting yesterday in Pine Grove township, Venango county.

Hayes T. Englert, division game supervisor, said the number of hunters in the Venango area fell off 50 per cent from Monday but the kill was heavy.

Ed Fritz, Jr., 32, electrical engineer of New Castle, had a highly successful hunt. Going to his old hunting ground near De Young, Elk county, Fritz got a big four-point buck after only 10 minutes in the woods.

In Warren county, Donald Vincini of Weldbank proved that a broken neck is no handicap to a hunter. Despite a heavy plaster cast he was wearing as the result of an injury suffered a few weeks ago, Vincini went into the woods and came back with a deer. And without injury to his broken neck.

Harrisburg, Dec. 4 (P)—The state Farm Show Commission has enough soft coal stored up to keep the vast Farm Show buildings heated during the annual Farm Show from January 13 to 17.

The Commission said the coal piled up during the mild fall weather and would be available next month when farm leaders from all parts of Pennsylvania converge here for the annual meetings and exhibitions.

Governor Urges Seal Sale Support

Harrisburg, Dec. 4 (P)—Pennsylvanians are urged by Governor Martin to "give full support to the Christmas seal sale" as an aid to stamping out tuberculosis.

Martin, in a statement, said the state is a leader in the use of X-ray as a means of searching for symptoms of the disease.

COACHES FAVOR SOME CHANGES IN GRID RULES

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Dec. 4 (P)—College football rules, as a whole, are old, as they are, the nation's coaches indicated today by their replies to an Associated Press questionnaire, although a few of the gridiron professors thought there was need for some revision and clarification of the code.

Probably the two most outspoken mentors were Charles Caldwell of Princeton and Lou Little of Columbia.

Caldwell recommends the elimination of the automatic five-yard penalty which is assessed when a defensive lineman is offside and makes contact with a player on the offense.

Tricked By Virginia.

"As this rule now stands," Caldwell said, "it invites coaches to play unethical football and yet stay within the rules by developing trick formations to draw the opposing linemen offside."

"For instance," he continued, "in our game with Virginia we were completely taken in. Virginia used the T-formation and on four occasions they faked plays from the T, then merely shifted into a kick formation to draw our line offside. In each instance it cost us five yards and brought Virginia a first down."

Little long has advocated that the ball be brought in 20 yards from the sidelines after an out-of-bounds play, instead of the 15 yards now permitted.

Pros Adopted Change

"We talked of it first but didn't do anything about it," he added, "but the professionals have gone ahead and made it a part of their code. I think we should do likewise."

As head of the football coaches rules committee, Little says the mentors favor a rule which denies a recovering team the right to advance with a fumbled lateral but declare all other loose footballs possible be picked up and advanced if possible.

Bernie Bierman, mentor at Minnesota, suggests that the clock be done away with entirely and that a quarter consist of 40 plays.

Another suggested rule change would declare the ball dead if the pigskin were blocked or fumbled on the try for the extra point.

Early English law required every tea merchant to have a selling license.

Senate Victory Cost Martin Only $4,300.65

Washington, Dec. 4 (P)—Governor Edward Martin reported $4,300.65 expenses for the campaign which won him a U. S. Senatorship, records of the Secretary of the Senate showed today.

Martin, a Republican, listed contribution of $2,500 received from the national Republican Senatorial committee, but his report showed he turned the money over to the Republican state committee and added a $1,500 contribution of his own.

These sums made up $4,000 of the expenses listed. The remainder was itemized as hotel and transportation costs.

Variety of Trades

William Wavel was a plasterer. Henry Martin was a railroad clerk and Harry Gilbert worked at the same trade he is now in, wall papering. George Stover was a barber and James B. Aumen worked in a cannery factory on North Stratton street as did Luther Dietrich. George Gordon was a policeman and Danner Weirman and Robert Brinkerhoff were printers. Mr. Brinkerhoff is still engaged in that business in Washington. Maurice McCullough later became a rural letter carrier and John Thorn was a carpenter. William Caldwell was a bartender and Charley Tate conducted a green grocery business.

Shortly after the turn of the century Mr. Danner moved his museum across Baltimore street to the site now known as the old Citizens' Trust Company building, owned by Nick Meligates and used as an automobile display room. There, a few years after the accompanying picture was taken another photograph was made on a later February 22. It will be published in tomorrow's edition of The Times.

The late William H. "Boss" Tip-ton took both photographs.

BRIDGE TO PARADISE

Chapter 12

All eyes were upon him, and David was grateful for the entrance at that moment of a young man who came in with Mr. Blount, and was introduced as Paul Granger, son of the railroad magnate.

"We youngsters," joked Mr. Blount, mopping his perspiring brow and bald dome, "had to have our fling on the dance floor."

"My son," Mr. Granger explained to David, "is on the last lap of an engineering course. Never saw a boy so determined to be an engineer."

In that singular and unexplainable flash of intuition, David recognized a connatural friendship with the youth. Paul drew a chair alongside him. For some time they talked while the older men discussed railroads, bridges, civic problems in general. And politics, of course.

David gave divided attention to Paul's eager talk of engineering, for one ear was keen to hear the conversation of his elders; but after a short time he saw Nella outside studying the pictures on the wall near the door. He chuckled inwardly, and gave full attention to Paul. Nella could give him the low-down tomorrow.

One of the white-coated negroes came in with a decanter of wine and glasses. The city fathers and industrial leaders relaxed and grew expansive under the warming influence of the wine, but David, who drank only a thimbleful, aired his views without restraint, damning their politics, pointing the way, the only way, by which anything whatsoever could be accomplished.

Paul championed his every word, adding his idealistic views. The older men, acquiesced, humored them, and David was too young, too inexperienced, to know that they were leading him on, pumping him dry, while behind inscrutable eyes they sorted and filed his every statement to damn him before the day of election. Sykes and Blount tried to save him from himself a number of times, but to no avail.

Mr. Granger, though, was genuinely interested in the bridge across the gulch when David fired into an altruistic sermon regarding it, and expressed a desire to have a look at David's design before leaving town.

Mr. Blount said, "It's sad when we grow old and lose the fresh, scintillating ideals of youth. No doubt we've all tried to make them work in our day. We've beaten against iron walls until we were exhausted and acquiescent from sheer weariness. We're obstructed, lost in a maze of obstinacy and human greed."

Old heads and middle-aged heads nodded, but no one spoke for a moment. Ross Headley pursed his lips, indicating deep thought. Alvin Sykes leaned forward and clasped bony fingers together, drew them apart.

Then Paul Granger's clear young voice burst out. "Just the same, Mr. Blount, we all know Mr. Graham — David — is absolutely right."

They were all unaware of Corinne's lovely form framed in the doorway, dark eyes luminous, looking at David. "I hope you'll pardon me," she faltered, "but David has the next dance with me."

"What say?" boomed her father, then he smiled ingratiatingly at David. "Of course, of course, we mustn't detain the young folk from their fun."

David jumped up. "Excuse me, gentlemen, I'm neglecting my duty to my hostess." He strode to the door and joined Corinne.

"Would you mind if we didn't dance?" she ventured as they walked through the spacious living room filled with the chatter of matrons. "It's warm. Let's go outside."

In the tiny hallway leading onto the stone porch and out of human sight, he caught her soft shoulder, looked at her through low-lidded eyes. "We'll forget what happened between us, tonight, Corinne," he said hoarsely. "There's no use for you to pretend or try any stunts to bring me around to your father's viewpoint. It won't work."

Her slim body seemed to wilt before his eyes. She lowered her eyes to close the agony of defeat from his vision. Then suddenly she straightened, lifted her head high. "Well, it was worth trying," she retorted.

"Not on me," he said, "but now that we understand each other, let's get out where we can breathe."

Despite the warm air, Corinne was cold to her fingertips. She wanted desperately to talk with him, wanted to ask him what he had said to cause Paul Granger to defend his position. She had heard the words: "We all know David is right." If he could know what was in his heart, what he wanted to do, perhaps she could help him whether he wanted it or not. Paul — she had only met Paul tonight, but she could find out from him. All those old heads in there were against David. She was sure of that.

They stepped out on the stone porch. "What the devil!" David exclaimed. "Good Lord, the whole world must be on fire!"

They stood, spellbound, watching the ominous red haze hanging above the town, dense smoke curling, thick and terrible toward the sky. David knew that the thing all Headleyville had dreaded and expected for months had happened. The network of shanties thrown up for workmen was a mass of smoke and flame. Hundreds of men and women and children would be homeless, and the stark truth struck through his frenzied mind — they would have nowhere to go.

Abruptly, David shook off Corinne's hand clinging to his arm and sprinted across the lawn to Nella's car. He was driving rapidly down the street before Corinne reached the curb in an effort to follow him.

E. J. Altoff, chairman of the soliciting committee, gave a final report on the recent canvass for funds for the company. The total donations amounted to $2,002.03.
Fire Chief Jay D. Basehoar, reported three fires during the past month. The first was at Gettysburg college. The American LaFrance pumper received its first real test at this fire, and its performance

Red Cross and Women's Community club. A committee was appointed to contact fire victims in the future, and to find out if help is needed, and what could be done. This committee is composed of Jay D. Basehoar, Monroe J. Staveley, and Edward
G. Loeffel.
The company voted a $2 donation to the Adams County Tuberculosis society for Christmas seals. The plaque committee reported that the memorial plaque for Ernest W.
Mayers, World War II casualty, had been returned to the factory for a correction. The fire chief urged the members to come out for practice and get acquainted with the new equipment. Plans were made for training new members to be elected in January. The guess package
